

09 July 2017

Meet on development of tuna fisheries in Andamans held addata, citation and similar papers at core.ac.uk brought to you by

provided by CMFRI Digital

Some of the tuna that were caught by Nagapattinam fishermen.

KOCHI: The Andaman and Nicobar Islands endowed with bountiful resources is a goldmine for potential investors and emerging entrepreneurs to milk the most out of its marine resources, said A&N Administration Chief Secretary Anindo Mazumdar. He was delivering the presidential address during the inauguration of the stakeholders' meet on the development of tuna fisheries in A&N Islands at the Central Institute of Fisheries Technology (CIFT) here on Saturday.

“With 16 flights a day, Port Blair is now well-connected with the mainland. Also, steps have been initiated for launching high-speed internet connectivity in the Islands,” he said.

Mazumdar, who offered single-window clearance for interested entrepreneurs, also said the A&N administration would come out with a comprehensive fisheries policy for livelihood development in the fisheries sector. Ramesh Verma, secretary, Department of Fisheries, A&N Administration, who welcomed the gathering, highlighted the umpteen opportunities for large-scale investments in the fisheries sector in the Island. He explained the initiatives by the Department of Fisheries for the development of the sector. CIFT director C N Ravisankar also spoke.

Stakeholders and fishermen from different coastal states, including Gujarat, Tamil Nadu, Andhra Pradesh, Karnataka and Kerala; personnel from A&N administration, MPEDA, Matsyafed, ANIIDCO, NABARD, and CMFRI were present at the conference.

J Chandrashekar, Director of Fisheries, A&N Administration, proposed a vote of thanks.